“ This was my dad and despite all of his faults, I loved him so very, very much and his death has left me devastated and missing a very large part of myself. I know he is no longer suffering or in physical pain or mental anguish or a negative mindset of dementia and other things anymore. I pray he is now in the safest place he can be which is in Jehovah's eternal loving memory and I also pray that one day soon I will get to see him again when he is happy and loving and laughing and funny again. Speaking only on the love he had for his grandson, my son, I know that he had a deep, unfathomable and unconditional love for him. I can speak on that love alone because I know what he felt and I could see it displayed all the time. He had a very special bond with him. I hope that when we meet again that we can make happy, new, loving memories. Until then I will try to remember the good and not the gaping hole his loss has left in my mind, heart and the depths of my soul. I will love him and miss him forever and always. I have and will continue to do so until I hopefully see him again or until I draw my final breath on this planet. Until then I know and must remember that Jehovah has promised, "I will wipe out every tear from their eyes, and death will be no more, neither will mourning nor outcry nor pain be anymore..." and "Do not be amazed at this, for the hour is coming in which all those in the memorial tombs will hear his voice²⁹ and come out, those who did good things to a resurrection of life...".... I hope and pray that I will be there to see that and that one of those people will be my daddy, along with all those others I have lost. Thank you to all who loved my dad, called him a friend and put up with his shenanigans, or even contributed to them throughout his life. --Jody
